JUDGES AND JURORS.

In a recent number of Tinsley's Mage sine there appears an article upon "The Jury in America" by Albany Fonblanque, which, from the generally accurate character of its criticisms, shows the writer to have made himself somewhat familiar with the subject and disposed to be impartial in his treatment of it. But he is not altogether correct in his conclusions.

The system of criminal trials by jury in the United States is so much diversified by statutory regulation in different States that it is a vast field to cover without long and careful investigation, such as few foreign observers have time to devote to it, and it is not surprising, therefore, that the writer in this instance has been led into some errors.

It is true, as he says, that in America every State tries its own criminals according to its own laws before judges who are either elected by the people or nominated by authorities so chosen;" but it is not invariably or even largely true, as he further says, and to use his own language, that "the political lawyer, who has gone through the process by which alone political office can be obtained, never loses his identity, nor has his personality absorbed into a system so that the sentences he passes are regarded as its decrees and not his own."

It sometimes happens, even in the case of so august a tribunal as the Supreme Court of the United States, that, as President Hendricks said at Yale the other day, it "passes beyond the sphere of ordinary judicial inquiry into the field of statesmanship," which is too often but another name for partisanship, but as a rule, and especially in criminal cases, the decisions of our courts, considering the elective nature of their constitution, are singularly free from political bias.

The writer is also in error when he says that in this country "there is no public opinion in the sense of a force which will promote good and condemn evil on the general merits of a case, or prevent an official, or set of officials, from doing what they have the power to do, because it is wrong." There may not be here, as in England, with its small area, its dense population and comparative homogeneity of race, such a compact and controlling force, for in the United States public opinion is grouped, as it were, by differences of locality, education, social conditions and other multiform circumstances peculiar to the new world: but the force exists nevertheless, and it asserts itself on occasions with an energy that is abso-

It was seen at Cincinnati in the popula outbreak against the laxity into which the administration of justice had temporarily fallen, and the influence of that demonstration was felt from sea to sea. It was the will of the people rising to a grave emergency, local in its origin but national in its character, and the heart of the whole country answered to its vibrations. It has been seen many times since in the swift retribution which has overtaken not only the ordinary criminal, but conspicuous violators of fiduciary trusts. It is perceptible in the universal approval with which the verdict and sentence in the case of the late president of the Marine National Bank has been received. It is noted in the careful discriminations with which the exercise of the pardoning power is coming to be exercised.

But there is one thing in which Mr. Fonblanque is clearly right-his condemnation of the American theory that a juryman is incapable of giving a verdict according to the law and the evidence it he has previously formed an opinion, and the fallacy that in the eye of the law an opinion is unchangeable. This is one of the most serious faults of our system, for the reason that in many cases it prohibits from jury service the most intelligent element in the community-the element which forms opinions without prejudiceand supplies its place with the least intelligent, which forms prejudices without opinion, "This," says our writer, "appears to strike at the root of the object for which a trial is held; that is, disputive discussion in which contradictory statements are weighed and the balance of credibility struck."

A GOOD APPOINTMENT. One of the most important positions in the Treasury Department, from a commercial standpoint, is that of Chief of the Customs Division, vacated by Mr. James' involuntary retirement. Importers in all the principal cities have taken an interest in the appointment, and Secretary Manning's decision has been awaited im-

Department The decision has now been reached, and of Scotland, a citizen of Minnesota, and for many years an employe of the Customs Division. His appointment will probably be announced in time to take effect July 1. Some years ago Mr. McGregor was dismissed on account of his Democratic principles, but his valuable experience and knowledge secured his prompt reinstatement, and he has since risen to assistant chief. At the time of Mr. James' retirement he assumed the duties of chief, and has since performed them in the most satisfactory and successful manner.

Secretary Manning has steadily refused to consider any political appointment, and has promised that the selection should be on business principles, the best fitted man being the one to be given the place. The appointment is, therefore, on the strictest principles of administrative reform, an l will be generally commended.

SIR ARTHUR SULLIVAN, the English composer, arrived in New York yesterday, and intends to do all he can to make the representation of his opera, the "Mikado," a success in this country. America has done so much for him, he says, and has shown such a kind appreciation of all his compositions that he cannot have any but a very friendly feeling towards his Ameritumed home much improved.

can cousins. And the cousins have a very kindly feeling toward this sensible and brilliant Englishman. He has made us all happier by his captivating music. It is Englishmen of Sir Arthur's stamp whom we like to have an opportunity of entertaining in return.

REV. ROBERT COLLYER Of New York, in his last Sunday's sermon at the Church of the Messiah, advised those of his con pregation who were intending to leave own for the summer, to take few books with them, and no newspapers. What does he take his hearers to be, that he yould thus shut them out from the busy world, so that not even an echo of its activities might fall upon their ears? They may get along well enough without the Doctor's weekly sermons, but without the daily monitors of human progress never. As well condemn them to progressive paralysis at once.

GENERAL LOGAN, in his Norfolk Club peech, says that civil-service reform which is "a child of the Republican party," has unfortunately been "put out to nurse with a stranger" and now looks "sick unto death." Evidently the Senator hasn't seen the robust infant of late. It has kept the whole Democratic party awake with its bawling for the last four months and been stuffed with any amount of sweetmeats. But of course Logan wouldn't be satisfied with anything less than the whole earth.

IN HIS speech before the Norfolk Club of Boston last evening, General Logan made flattering reference to the influence of Massachusetts and the obligations under which it had placed the West to the old Bay State. This was a shrewd piece of diplomacy. The Senator, doubtless, remembered how Mr. Blaine, upon a certain occasion, gave Massachusetts a piece of his mind, which she has never forgotten and will never forgive.

THE semi-annual dividends payable in Boston the coming month aggregate $10,014,743, of which the principal item is interest on bonds, over $6,000,000. To show the depression of the manufacturing industries of New England, it is only necessary to point to the dividends of manufacturing companies, which foot up only $382,000-the smallest semi-annual statement which has been made in years

THE paragraph lately put in circulation to the effect that Mrs. O. F. Reynolds of Lafayette, Indiana, a wealthy lady of 56 years, and mother of Congressman Hitt of Illinois, was about to marry a young man at Indianapolis, not yet 30, proves to be a fabrication; and such fabrications are more than silly. They are cruel and cowardly, without even the redeeming quality of wit.

It is good news to hear that affairs have so greatly improved in the Hocking Vallev. As yet there is no boom in business but there is a gradual and substantial increase in the output of coal. The miners are paid in cash every week and are doing fairly well, much better, at any rate, than for many months past.

MR. GLADSTONE is still there, and evidently intends to stay-at the head of the Liberal party. The Queen, who thought to comfort his old age with a peerage, was mistaken in her man.

BLESSED is the man who invented sleep, and thrice blessed he who invented a cold wave attachment to go with it.

A NEW MODELING paper called the Mail

A NEW MORNING paper called the Mail has just been started in London on the American pattern, and it is the intention American pattern, and it is the intention of the proprietors to spend $150,000 the first year, if necessary, to insure the success of the enterprise, backing this amount with $150,000 more should the outlook at the end of that period seem to justify the expenditure. The venture is a daring one, and will be watched in this country with a good deal of interest.
